

Dr. Kavita Koli, Ph.D
Producer Radio

Dr. Kavita Koli is a distinguished alumnus of the AJK Mass Communication Research Centre, Jamia Millia Islamia University in Delhi. Since joining the University School of Mass Communication in December 2009, Dr. Koli has played an integral role in advancing media education and production at the university.

With extensive training in specialized fields including Radio and TV production, scriptwriting, film production, and editing, Dr. Koli brings a wealth of knowledge and expertise to her position. She has notably supervised numerous student documentaries, fiction films, and radio projects, fostering the creative talents of aspiring media professionals.

An active participant in the academic community, Dr. Koli has presented several research papers at national seminars sponsored by the University Grants Commission, Government of India, and other prestigious organizations. Her contributions to the field are further evidenced by her research publications in referred journals, highlighting her commitment to advancing media studies.

In 2021, Dr. Koli launched the university's podcast channel, 'IPU.RADIO', on Spotify, bridging the gap between traditional media and digital platforms. As the program coordinator for IPU.RADIO, she curates and oversees content, providing students with valuable hands-on experience in podcast production.
